THE SPANISH COUP D'ETAT.

Particulars of the Outbreak in Italy.

FRIGHTFUL EARTHQUAKE IN THE MOLUCCAS.

THREE THOUSAND LIVES LOST.

The Canada arrived at her dock, Boston, at [illegible] hour yesterday morning. Her mails reached this City yesterday afternoon.

We publish below details of the news, a summary of which has been already telegraphed from Halifax. There is little additional intelligence.

The latest news from Spain is derived from the Monitor—an authority, however, not to be implicitly relied on. It seems that, according to the accounts received by the French Government, the Junta is being ventured everywhere, except at Saragossa. The insurgents there were deserting in large numbers.

It is generally believed that O'DONNELL will not be able to maintain the position he now occupies.

Details of the outbreak at Massa Carrara, on the frontiers of Parma have come to hand. The movement, as before reported, was an insignificant one.

The London Daily News has an article, which we copy, concerning the expected settlement of the Central American question. Great Britain, it says, will give up the Bay Islands to Honduras.

The Times, in an article on the question of the Sound Dues, says that the compensation to Denmark ought to close the matter at once and forever, and not, like the plan of paying at the ports of clearance or discharge, leave the amount to grow with the increase of trade till it might well happen that foreign nations might have the honor of defraying the whole expense of government and education in the little kingdom of Denmark. England, it says, had better pay a round sum to be done of the tax altogether.

The London Star has an article supporting the American view on the subject of Privateering.

The Indian Mail had brought an account of a fearful earthquake and volcanic eruption in the Molucca, by which 3,000 persons lost their lives.

THE UNITED STATES AND ENGLAND.

Expected Settlement of the Central American Question.

From the London Daily News.

Although the passage in the Queen's speech [illegible] Mr. DALLAS had actually concluded a new Treaty, or that much perplexed [illegible] very simple question, we are entitled [illegible] that the negotiations are concluded. Such is, in point of fact is, we believe, the case. Commencing the discussion with a sincere and hearty desire to arrive at the only rational conclusion that could enter the minds of conscientious and really responsible statesmen, Lord CLARENDON and Mr. DALLAS [illegible], it is understood, given themselves no time to waste in wasting any of the points in dispute either to a third power, or a board of scientific men, but have taken into their own hands a settlement of the whole question. For this purpose the representative of a third State has been [illegible] in their negotiations and deliberations—the Minister of the Republic of Honduras—and his admission leads irresistibly to the conclusion that England, instead of "scattering to the winds the CLAYTON-BULWER Convention, whatever the consequence," as a writer in the Edinburgh Review [illegible] to have to pursue the far more [illegible] of transferring the Bay Islands, which she does not want, to the State of Honduras, which they geographically and properly belong to.

* * * * * * *

The real question ought not to be one of an [illegible] research, whether Belize did or did not belong to the Vice-Royalty of Yucatan, and whether Bay Islands were or were not dependencies of Belize. The world and its affairs are past such inquiries. The inquiry which all mankind is concerned in is, how to get a neutral and a free route across Central America. The best contribution England can at present make towards its solution is to hand the Bay Islands, on terms compatible with its honor, and the protection, safety and good government of those who have of British inclination settled there, over to the State of Honduras—Honduras on its part giving to England guarantees in respect of their population, and in respect to the neutrality and freedom of the railway, to promote which England makes so substantial a contribution. That route once accomplished and maintained, and Greytown established as a free port and independent republic, under the protection of the maritime powers, England will have done more to promote and extend the commerce and civilization of the world than she could by [illegible] defective title at Ruatan, [illegible] to an obsolete protectorate over Mosquitia.

This, we have reason to believe, is the spirit in which Lord CLARENDON has met Mr. DALLAS, and if the spirit be fully and freely responded to by the United States negotiator, we may reasonably [illegible] the dispute between England and America will shortly be settled on a foundation in the durability of which all the world will be interested; that the concluding act of President PIERCE's Government will go far towards saving it from that reprobation; while England will have given the world a noble example of moderation, and United States orators be deprived for a season of the luxury of declaiming against our grasping ambition.

[illegible] between the United States and Great Britain.

From the London Times, July 21.

The recent accounts from the United States prove how truly wise has been the policy that prefered enduring an affront to encountering a war. The issue of the New-York papers assures us that, far from being compromised by allowing Mr. DALLAS to remain, the character of this country and the dignity of its Government have risen considerably in the estimation of the American people. Nor could it be otherwise. Mr. MARCY has represented that state of feelings in America which were [illegible] and the contempt which [illegible] the jealous susceptibilities of the younger branch of our family. He had adopted at all events the vindication of that national irritability which we so often see typified among ours [illegible] the dangers of the collateral to the [illegible] of the country concerned. We had [illegible]; they had smarted. We had [illegible] and reasons censured and condemned; they had retorted and recriminated in [illegible] at our occasional remonstrances. Mr. MARCY, with a dexterity which both parties knew how to appreciate, seized an opportunity for turning a difficulty into an embarrassment and fomenting a difference into a quarrel. A few more strokes of the pen, a few more interesting speeches on the one side and a firm answer and resolution on the other, and yet at the moment 30,000,000 of British subjects would have been exclusive the materials for carrying destruction among 27,000,000 of kindred people on the other side of the Atlantic. This has been prevented, and the game in the tendency to war has been [illegible] by those whose language and actually been, not the less provoking of the war, and whose calculations of success were expressed in a tone as satisfactory and as inconsiderate to us as possible, but by that power which, having once appealed, was called upon to [illegible] and be reminded that it possessed the material resources for imposing conditions on others. England behaved like the head of the family in one of our national comedies, who, when being insulted by some of the younger members, restrains his impatient desire for summary castigation, slaps his legs, and exclaims, that [illegible] or destroy any [illegible] in the direction of the seat of justice, magistrates or [illegible] doing those acts by means of [illegible] property, for the purpose, or by chance which were originally designed for better uses?" There is no answering this logic, for the common sense and the natural conscience of mankind are on its side.

But the American Government does not stop here. "If," say they, "you are sincere in wishing to put down privateering, abolish the piratical system on which it subsists; treat private property at sea on the same principle of inviolability by which it is now everywhere guarded, in civilized warfare, on land. Why should the merchandise of a private citizen be safe from spoliation by an army when found in his warehouse on shore, and not be equally secure from plunder by a navy when in his floating warehouse at sea?" Again there is no answering this reasoning. Indeed, no attempt is made by writers on the law of nations to assign any ground for the distinction hitherto drawn between private property on land and private property on sea, except the arbitrary ground of custom, a plea which, if we ascend a little further back in the history of the world, may be urged with equal force in defence of a hundred other barbarous usages in war which have been gradually abolished by the general consent of mankind. And as the present proposal comes from a power which can insist upon being dealt with according to rules of fairness and justice, there is little doubt that it will ultimately become the international law of the civilized world. The consequences will be vast and almost incalculable.

We shall have to recur, again and again, to the bearings of this question on the interests of peace and humanity. Meanwhile we draw the attention of our readers to what is going on, with this single word of comment, that second only to the regret we feel that England has not had the honor of proposing this new doctrine, would be our sorrow to find that she sets herself in unseeling opposition to its adoption.

THE COUP D'ETAT IN SPAIN.

Progress of the Insurrection.

From the London Daily News, July 21.

At length there is intelligence of considerable importance from Spain. The insurrection, so far from being nearly put down, as the Madrid journals have for several days been pretending, is evidently spreading and assuming formidable proportions.

The Madrid Gazette of the 25th admits that "there are still several towns in the province of Granada in a state of insurrection," but it professes to feel no uneasiness at the fact, which it attributes solely to the circumstance of the troops being without a leader, Gen. BLANCO having been "most unexpectedly" taken prisoner by the insurgents at Jaen. Private letters, however, put the affair in a very different light.

It appears that at Granada the National Guard, having obtained permission from the Captain-General to assemble, immediately assumed a hostile attitude. The troops sent against them "showed so much indecision," (that is the expression used by a party favorable to O'DONNELL,) that the Captain-General felt it necessary to "consent to an armistice of six days." In other words, he was constrained to allow the insurrection to organize itself. The National Guards put themselves in communication with various neighboring localities, where risings took place, and Gen. BLANCO, who had been sent by Government to supersede the Captain-General on account of the "weakness" shown by the latter, was taken prisoner by the brothers MENDEO while attempting to reach his post. At Malaga the troops joined the National Guards, and headed by the civil Governor made their pronunciamento against the coup d'état. It is, however, reported that all the officers above the rank of chef de bataillon withdrew from their men. The latest news represents Almeri and Jaen as still maintaining a hostile attitude.

Letters from Barcelona of the 26th, received at Marseilles, state that General ZAPATERO held the town with a force of about twelve thousand men, and that the streets had "nearly" resumed their ordinary appearance. The "greater part" of the factory operatives had returned to their work. Many, however, had "followed the insurgents," who have left the town, and, joined by the peasantry, scour the country, having for their headquarters the mountains in the neighborhood of Barcelona. This is exactly what was feared. At the date of the 26th it was stated in Barcelona that Saragossa, having received from various quarters detachments of regular troops which had "pronounced" against the Government, formed a stronghold of resistance. It was added that the peasants of Lower Aragon were still marching in large numbers to join the insurrection at Saragossa, just as those of Catalonia rallied around Barcelona. These accounts go to corroborate the statements as to the formidable numbers of General FALCON's orces made by the Moniteur a few days ago—a statement which it has never retracted, although it has published less authentic intelligence not easily reconcilable with it. It is quite clear by this time that the stories of General FALCON having fled, of General DULCE having opened fire on Saragossa several days ago, and of his being in a condition to cut off the supply of provisions from the insurgent garrison, were all inventions of O'DONNELL's party.

The Simaphore, of Marseilles, says: The Spanish packet El Vifredo, which left Barcelona on the morning of the 26th, has arrived. The following is a summary of the principal news: "Barcelona has returned to its normal condition; most of the factories have resumed work. Sixteen thousand troops are concentrated in the town, under the command of General ZAPATERO, Governor of Catalonia. If, however, the town is calm, the same cannot be said of the environs. The insurgents who were driven out on the 21st spread themselves over the country, raised the peasantry, and are at this moment encamped with them in the mountains. According to letters from Saragossa arrived at Barcelona at the moment of the departure of the El Vifredo, the number of the rebels was constantly increasing in consequence of the defection of some regiments in Aragon, and of the arrival of the peasants, who, as at Barcelona, made common cause with the insurgents. The Queen's troops sent from Madrid had not yet arrived."

A letter in the Presse says: "Two days ago the Queen, obeying the suggestions of those by whom she is surrounded, frankly demanded from Marshal O'DONNELL the return of her mother. The Minister only replied by a respectful silence."

The Madrid correspondent of the Independence Belge, in a letter dated July 24, says that he is positively informed that it is the intention of the Government to regard the Constituent Cortes as defunct, and officially to proclaim their dissolution as soon as order shall have been reestablished. The Government will not think of convening a new Constituent Assembly to deliberate upon the future Constitution of the country, but will impose upon it either the Constitution of 1837 or the Constitution of 1845; but which of these has not yet been determined. If the Constitution of 1837 be adopted, a modification of it will be made by changing the elective charter of the Senate; if the Constitution of 1845 be preferred, an article will be added to it securing the immunity of certain individuals, with a provision for completely extinguishing the liberty of the press.

It is said by the Paris correspondent of the Independance, that NARVAEZ, on his way back to Paris, traveled in the same railway carriage with OLOZAGA, the Spanish Ambassador, and that they were engaged in earnest conversation all the way. Lord HOWDEN, he says, is still at Paris.

Barcelona.

PARTICULARS OF THE STRUGGLE.

The London Daily News has published the following letter, emanating from one who participated in the struggle which he narrates:

"BARCELONA, July 23, Evening.—ZAPATERO has held good to the last. The Constitutionalists have thrown up the game for the time, and the sword rules at Barcelona. The partial manifestations of the 18th, intended to give the troops upon whom we relied the opportunity to pronounce, failed completely. The superior officer, who, the evening before, at the meeting of the militia chiefs, promised to come over to us with his battalion, did not appear at the head of his troops. (I have heard this morning that he was confined to barracks and put under surveillance.) The command had been given to other officers. The militia of the 1st and 18th, who were instructed to engage in a light skirmish, after which the troops were to join the defenders of the barricades—these militiamen, seeing that the firing was vigorously kept up by the army, thought themselves betrayed, and retired. Some individuals taking by the bridle had, it was said, been shot to death. The most sinister rumors circulated all the 19th. It was impossible to direct the movement. The thirst of vengeance alone animated the militia. Five battalions would no longer listen to the advice of the leaders of the movement, and barricades were erected in the town, at the points where the struggle has been generally maintained. After being obstinately defended, they were carried by the troops, who penetrated into the houses and thence fired on the militia. During the night of the 19th the brave chiefs of Liberty [illegible] until the fourth day that the Junta [illegible] to direct the movement. If Gen. BLANCO had been free and kept in his command, he would have carried his troops along with him, and fraternized with the militia; the general progression among the garrison, encouraged by the example, would have come over to us, and we should have triumphed. But when ZAPATERO had compromised the troops by the military execution of the prisoners, no hope remained of inducing them to pronounce. A terrible butchery was the consequence, and, although the Junta spared no exertions to cause its plan to be adopted, the fury of the militia engaged drowned all reason. As you may easily conceive, the brave citizens of Barcelona have done prodigies of valor. A woman in the Rue de l'Union, after seeing the heroic defenders of the barricades fall one after another, long maintained the struggle, herself firing, and succeeded in effecting her retreat with the last survivers, after having carried away the dead bodies, and having saved all the wounded. But how much blood has been spilt, in vain? Had the plan of the Junta been adopted the loss of so many brave defenders of liberty and of progress would have been spared. From the second day we knew that MONTHOLON would side with ZAPATERO; that the garrison of the town would not pronounce. The tisedores, (weavers,) on being sounded, had declared that they would take no part in the movement unless the Junta adopted a war cry, which would have spoilt everything; the same answer was made by the mechanics to the overtures of the Junta. In place of imitating the wise course of Saragossa, which rested entirely upon the Constitution, and rallied round the liberador, (ESPARTERO,) the bravest of our people wished to go so far that the Junta was compelled to refuse its concurrence. Hence, setting aside those whom revolutionary feelings carried away, those who cannot hear the firing, or smell powder without being intoxicated, not one joined in the combat, which was sustained by the militia alone. San Augustin furnished not a single combatant. But I return to a plan of the Junta. To make the militia descend into the streets, when that portion of the army which was considered certain had pronounced to engage along the whole line, to maintain it with such energy as to give the other bodies the opportunity of joining us, and thus compel ZAPATERO to shut himself up in the citadel, and thus remain masters of the city until events brought the capitulation of the citadel and of Montjuich. If, after the first attack, all the troops remained under the orders of ZAPATERO, to retire into the country, where, from all quarters, arrive promises of pronunciamento. The uncontrollable fury of some battalions prevented until the fourth day the execution of this plan, and by allowing ZAPATERO—in consequence of the greatness and obstinacy of the struggle—to adopt terrible repressive measures, the future means of resistance were compromised. This is our present position. The soldiers of liberty, who would have been able for some time longer to continue the struggle at Barcelona, have retreated to the country. Mataró Manresa, Villafranca, Igualada, almost all the towns of importance, are with us. In all the pueblos of the environs—Badalona, Molins del Rey, San Andres, &c.—we have none but friends. General ——, who resigned at Madrid, is expected every moment to take the direction of the movement in Catalonia, and to open communications with Arragon. But how many brave men, sacrificed in these bloody days, will never see the approaching triumph of the holy cause of progress! ZAPATERO renews, at Barcelona, the system of terror of the Baron DE MEER and the Conde DE ESPAÑA. The militia is disarmed. Hundreds of honorable citizens have been arrested. They say that several have been shot. We know not where those are who are still alive. We have news from Tarragona, where the instructions of the Junta were completely obeyed. After the demonstration, the troops not having adopted the movement, all struggle ceased, expecting the time when the triumph shall have been organized throughout. The last news from Arragon is excellent.

LATEST PARTICULARS.

A dispatch from Barcelona, dated the 29th July, says, that on the 28th 17 insurgents were shot for the assassination of Colonel OLIVIDO on the 19th.

The Simaphore, of Marseilles, says: "The Spanish packet El Vifredo, which left Barcelona on the morning of the 26th, has arrived. The following is a summary of the principal news: Barcelona has returned to its normal condition; most of the factories have resumed work. 16,000 troops are concentrated in the town, under the command of General ZAPATERO, Governor of Catalonia. The Queen's troops, sent from Madrid, had not yet arrived."

The Moniteur publishes the following telegraphic dispatch from the French Consul to his Excellency the Minister of Foreign Affairs:

BARCELONA, Tuesday, July 29—3 P. M.

Order continues to reign at Barcelona. The whole of Catalonia is in the power of the Queen's troops. The militia of Girona, like the militia in other localities, give up their arms, disperse, and return to their homes.

Saragossa.

Paris (July 29) Correspondence of the London Times.

From Arragon, although the telegraph is now at work, we have no news of the slightest interest. Troops must be arriving near Saragossa, and the truce of five days must shortly expire, so we may expect to hear something decisive very shortly. It is said that the Saragossans have dug ditches and made other preparations indicative of an intention obstinately to defend themselves, but it is still hoped that, when they become acquainted will all that has passed, and that the rest of Spain, with insignificant exceptions, has submitted to the Government, they will not prolong a resistance which may lead to much bloodshed, but hardly to their ultimate triumph.

The Moniteur publishes the following as the latest telegraphic dispatches officially received:

MADRID, Wednesday, July 30.

The authority of the Government of the Queen is recognized throughout the whole of Spain, with the exception of the interior of the town of Saragossa. Important intelligence is hourly expected.

ST. SEBASTIAN, Wednesday, July 30.

By a dispatch dated this day, Gen. ECHAGUE announces that Gen. DULCE is at La Muela, two leagues from Saragossa. There is no news.

The Rising at Corunna.

Paris (July 29) Correspondence of the London Times.

The Madrid papers bring us full accounts of the occurrences at Corunna, in the form of a dispatch from General VASALLO, now commanding there. They are not important, the total loss having been two men killed and two wounded, and the National Guards having given up their arms on receiving intelligence of the result of the contest at Madrid; but they are curious as an illustration of the state of the Spanish army, and of the dangerous tendency of its officers to postpone discipline to political considerations. The Captain-General of the Province was absent on a tour of inspection when news came of the change of ministry and the proclamation of martial law, but the segundo cabo, or second in command, published the proclamation notwithstanding the opposition of the civil governor, and reported what he had done to his chief, who promptly returned to Corunna, and who, almost immediately on his arrival, scoulded General VASALLO and the commanding officers of the various arms with respect to a pronunciamiento in favor of ESPARTERO, to which he himself evidently inclined. They all refused to join in any such demonstration, whereupon the captain-general, in accord with the civil governor, and having the regiments of Cantabria, quartered in the neighborhood, disposed to back him, was about to make a manifestation, when General VASALLO, supported by the chiefs of corps, resolved to take the command out of his hands. "A moment afterwards," he says, "the captain-general was decorously arrested, measures were taken to combat the insurrection, and an attempt was made to arrest the civil governor, which failed, however, with the loss of his already mentioned. From this we see how fatal the political practices common in Spain are to all military discipline. It is the old story, twenty times repeated in less than as many years. The superior officers of the Spanish army are all political partisans, rather than military soldiers.

Preparatory to the late crisis all the important posts had been packed by O'DONNELL, and in those few cases where he had been compelled to appoint or retain a captain general of a province

The Rising in Granada and Malaga.

From the Madrid Gazette, July 26.

Malaga has pronounced the civil governor, DOMINGO VELO, having placed himself at the head of the movement. The deputy-commander of Granada, who left on the 23d, was several chiefs and officers of the garrison of Malaga, who remained faithful to the Government, had arrived in that city. The second battalion of Aragon, the greatest part of the artillery, and a detachment of the civic guard, had retired into the castle of Gibralfaro. The revolutionary junta having prohibited the entrance of provisions into the castle, the commander of the royal troops, after proclaiming martial law, threatened to bombard the town if the junta maintained its decision. This energetic attitude produced the desired effect. The Carabineers had left Malaga, with their chiefs, for Estepona, being told that Granada had likewise pronounced. The Captain-General of Andalusia had since ordered them to join him at Granada, where they were expected on the 24th. The Almeria mail, due some days, has arrived, but brings no news. A column, composed of infantry, cavalry, and artillery, had left Valencia for Villaverde, where Brigadier DAMATO is concentrating forces to operate against Tamarit, which had declared against the Government. Notwithstanding the disarmament of the National Guard of Seville, some disturbances took place on the 23d at the gates of the city. Some of the revolters were killed, and order was reestablished.

Alleged Suppression of the Insurrection.

From the Monitor.

Private dispatches from Madrid, dated the 29th ult., transmitted by the telegraph, bring the following news: All the provinces of Spain recognize the authority of Government, except Saragossa. The resistance offered by some localities in the centre and the east lasted only for the time necessary to dispel the errors respecting facts, which had inspired the revolutionists with hopes of success. The disarming of the national militia is going on at all points, and the army shows itself everywhere valiant and loyal. The Government is engaged with the task of superseding weak or negligent authorities, without distinction of party. The Queen requires union and activity in every branch of the public administration. The letters sent by the correspondents of the French press are said to be in general inexact, and what they state respecting the strength of the insurrection at Saragossa is exaggerated. The rumors spread abroad about the discord and disunion in the Cabinet are entirely destitute of foundation. The troops of Generals DULCE and ECHAGUE are before Saragossa. The majority of the inhabitants of this city wish to surrender. An excited minority, belonging to the lowest ranks of society, alone endeavors to resist. The Government is devoting itself, before everything else, to the maintenance of public order. General ESPARTERO is living tranquilly at Madrid, and is not molested.

The Government at Madrid.

O'DONNELL'S POSITION.

A correspondence in the Presse, dated Madrid, July 23, says: "Marshal O'DONNELL finds all parties against him. He has to contend with the Progressists and the Moderates. He must already see that the Cabinet which he has formed can only be a Ministry of transition—the stepping-stone to a definitive Government, of which NARVAEZ will be the head. This is evident, logical, fatal. Wherever O'DONNELL turns he finds a critical situation. If, on the other hand, he would govern constitutionally with the Cortes, on what benches would he find a majority to support him, and to reply to the interpellations which would be addressed to him? How could he explain and justify his conduct? What guarantee can he have that he may not be overturned by an adverse vote, which might even go the extent of impeachment? But if, on the other hand, he would govern unconstitutionally, without the Cortes, what security has he that he will not be ignominiously dismissed by the Court, which can never forget the humiliating defeat which he inflicted upon it in 1854? Thus, whichever way he turns, O'DONNELL sees before him an abyss. He has no option between the two courses of retiring in obedience to a hostile vote of the Cortes, or yielding to a dismissal if he should venture to thwart the power which would have shot him in 1854 if his insurrectionary movement had not succeeded. This situation is so complicated that although on the first blush it would appear that O'DONNELL is all powerful and ESPARTERO a nullity, one must be blind not to see that the latter is in reality in a much stronger position than the former. ESPARTERO has not quitted Madrid. He resides in a house next door to the office of the journal called El Leon Espagnol, a paper which represents the old school of pure Moderates. In a recent conversation between the manager of this paper, Don J. DE LA VEGA, and Marshal ESPARTERO, the latter declared repeatedly that he had done all in his power to prevent an armed resistance."

REPORTED DIFFICULTIES IN THE CABINET.

Paris (July 29) Correspondence of the London Times.

It is no secret here that the resignations of Señor OLOZAGA, and of the Secretary of Embassy, Señor ESPAÑA, were sent in on the very first news of the events at Madrid, but that (although much more than the necessary time has since elapsed) no reply has been received on the subject from the Government of General O'DONNELL. The alleged offer of the Paris Embassy to General NARVAEZ made it appear probable that it was decided to remove the present Ambassador; but I yesterday informed you that no such offer had been made to the Duke of VALENCIA. The feeling here seems to be that the probabilities are in favor of Señor OLOZAGA's resignation being refused, and of his being requested to retain his post. There are various reasons for this belief. Independently of the impossibility of finding him a successor at once of equal ability and equally familiar with the state of the relations between the French and Spanish Governments, and of the various questions pending between them, it is clear that if O'DONNELL desires to govern by the support of the Progressists—and of this there now appears to be scarcely a doubt—the difficulty of conciliating that party would be greatly augmented by an open rupture with one of its most important members. Certain personal antipathies, even in a very high quarter, might be expected to urge his dismissal; but before yielding to these the Spanish Government would doubtless anxiously weigh the difference between securing his support and encountering his opposition—the latter especially formidable in the Cortes, where his ready eloquence and parliamentary experience render him so formidable an adversary. If O'DONNELL, then, seeks the aid of the Progressists, he will hardly willingly deprive himself of the support of Señor OLOZAGA; and if the programme of government he submits to them be such as to satisfy that party and secure him their support, there is no manifest reason why the present Ambassador at Paris should not be induced to withdraw his resignation. It is reported to-day that Señor OLOZAGA has received a communication from a person at Madrid, who, although not a member of the Cabinet, occupies a most important office, and is highly influential both with the Ministers and the Court, urging him not to insist upon resigning his present functions. I give this merely as a report, but as one that appears to me not improbably to be well founded.

THE OUTBREAK IN ITALY.

Particulars of the Rising at Massa Carrara.

Paris (July 29) Correspondence of the London Times.

This morning the Sardinian Government received a telegraphic dispatch from Sarzana, stating that about 200 persons with arms had during the night crossed the Modenese frontier near there, crying "Viva VITTORIO EMMANUELE, Re d'Italia!" They are said to have been furnished with arms in the Ducal territory, near Massa, where they joined a still larger body of insurgents already assembled; but, as they cut the telegraph wires in their passage, we are still without authentic particulars of their movements. I have already sent you a dispatch by telegraph containing this fact; but as messages containing political news are not allowed to be forwarded without express permission of the Government, and as all the Ministers were out of town until a late hour at Pollenza, where His Majesty held a council, it did not arrive, I fear, to be of any use for publication to-day.

As soon as the above information reached Sarzana, and Spezzia, from the gendarmes on the frontier, who had succeeded in escaping, a few of these facing their way over, troops were immediately put in motion from those places, the latter distance, and two companies were sent from Genoa in the course of the day, with other reinforcements. Opinion here is, of course, much divided as to the cause of this outbreak—some maintaining it to have been instigated by Austrian agents, while others hold that it is purely and simply one afford it a plausible pretext for again occupying the Romagna, which, since the departure of the French troops, all along the Papal frontier, from Piacenza to Ancona, has been the scene of this sort of thing, and which Austria may be expected to have occupied long before, but for the fear of the French. In the present state of the Papal frontier, the Austrians need only have given a few days' notice to the Papal Government of their intention to occupy the Romagna, and the Papal troops would have had to retire from it, or be forced out by the Austrians

THE PERSECUTION OF COL. FREMONT.

SENATOR WILSON'S SPEECH

On the Senate, on the 11th, when the Resolution introduced by Mr. BUCHANAN, of Pennsylvania, calling upon the Treasury Department for copies of the papers concerning the accounts of JOHN C. FREMONT with the Government, came up for consideration,

Hon. HENRY WILSON, of Massachusetts, rose and said:

Mr. PRESIDENT: The days of this session are rapidly passing. Business of the highest importance presses upon our consideration. Chairman of leading Committees, charged with measures of great public concern, crowd forward to obtain the ear of the Senate.

While the Senate is thus engaged in the performance of its high duties to the country, the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. BUCHANAN) thrusts before us this little, petty proposition—a proposition unworthy a moment's attention of honorable men, in or out of the Senate. The Senator from Pennsylvania, not content with launching into the Senate this scheme—which must have originated with some meddling politician, engaged in the pursuit of petty ends by petty means—but he presses its consideration now, in spite of the earnest remonstrances of the Chairman of the Committee on Finance, (Mr. HUNTER,) who is charged with the care of the Civil and Diplomatic bill, and the Chairman of the Committee on the Pacific Railroad, (Mr. WELLER,) who wishes to call the Senate to the consideration of that great measure, to unite the Atlantic and Pacific shores of the Republic. But the Civil and Diplomatic bill, and the Pacific Railroad bill, must be thrust aside, other measures must be thrust aside, by the Senator from Pennsylvania, that the Senate may consider this proposition by which certain political schemers hope to elicit something out of which they can manufacture slanders against a brave man who has served his country with eminent ability in peace and in war. The Senator from Pennsylvania cannot suppose that this proposition will pass this body without at least a passing notice. He takes the responsibility, he chooses to pass it, and I shall take at least a few moments of the time of the Senate to characterize the proposition, as I think it deserves.

Does the Senator from Pennsylvania expect to win laurels by thrusting this proposition into the Senate? Does he think the generous people of this country will applaud this attempt to wound the sensibilities and defame the character of one who has won a brilliant name in the history of the Republic—one whose explorations and scientific labors have conferred upon our country honor and renown among all civilized nations? Does he expect to win support for his favorite candidate for the Presidency by thrusting into the Senate this wretched proposition? This is small game. If that Senator hopes to win popular confidence and applause, if he hopes to turn back the tide of popular favor that is bearing JOHN C. FREMONT to the Executive Chair, by this resolution, which I here pronounce, which honorable men in and out of the Senate will pronounce, and which the country will pronounce, small and mean, he will find himself sadly mistaken. Wherever this proposition goes, high-minded men will treat it with derision, scorn and contempt; and its little of derision, scorn and contempt, will be visited upon the man who resort to such devices to effect political results.

I would not stoop to such a warfare as this. If it was aimed at JAMES BUCHANAN I would spurn it from me.

This is not the first time, Mr. President, that the shafts of political malignity have been hurled at men who have served the Republic, and it is not the first time that the Senate has been called upon to grope among the archives of the Government, to discover some account, or the records of some account between the Government and men who have been intrusted with public funds,—out of which something would be distorted for partisan ends.

In 1835, ANDREW JACKSON was assailed for his military deeds. The people, unmindful of these assaults, bore him proudly to the Presidential Chair over one of the purest, ablest and most uncorruptible patriots that ever graced the councils of the Republic.

In 1840 Gen. HARRISON was assailed by the government tongues of slander, branded a coward and denounced as a corrupt man, and the people took him in their arms and bore him to the Executive Chair over his experienced and accomplished competitor.

In 1848 ZACHARY TAYLOR, and the venerable Senator from Michigan, (Gen. CASS,) were both denounced in the same manner—their accounts with the Government through long years of public service, overhauled and audited over again by the political accountants and auditors.

In 1852 Gen. SCOTT, a soldier who has served the Republic for more than forty years in peace and war, with unsurpassed ability, was arraigned in the same manner and for a similar object. What was gained by these assaults upon JACKSON, HARRISON, TAYLOR, CASS, SCOTT? I venture to say here to-day, that all those assaults upon these distinguished men, concerning their monetary transactions with the Government, never lost them the confidence or support of any portion of the American people. Let the American people believe these assaults to be unjust, mean, contemptible. Pass this resolution, drag out of the departments the bills, vouchers, letters and papers between Col. FREMONT and the Government, garble them, scatter them over the land, blast their contents into the unwilling ear of the country, and the people, with that sense of justice, that practical judgment which distinguishes them, will pronounce it all political persecution.

Yes, Sir, this partisan scheme will bring upon its authors—upon the men engaged in its execution—not public confidence and regard, but public censure and contempt, and it will bring to Col. FREMONT the sympathy which honest men ever give to the persecuted.

Col. FREMONT was intrusted by his Government with high and responsible duties. Those duties were far distant from the seat of Government—beyond the borders of the States—in the Territories beyond the Father of Waters—in the Rocky Mountains—in California.

Those high and responsible duties were performed in a manner that won the commendation of the Government, the approval of honorable Senators upon this floor—and the applause and admiration of a grateful people.

His name is forever associated with the pathways to the golden shores of the Pacific, through the gorges of the Rocky Mountains—with the conquest and acquisition of California.

Money was intrusted in his hands. In the performance of duties assigned him, men, property, money, were all for months—years intrusted to his keeping. The people will demand why JOHN C. FREMONT is arraigned now—eight or ten years after his duties to his Government were performed. If his accounts were unsettled—if he had failed to account for money placed in his hands, if he was in any sense a defaulter, why, the people will demand, was he not reported as the laws require, by the proper officers? Why was his name left out of the list of public officers whose accounts were reported as unsettled?

On the 16th of January, 1854, Hon. ELISHA WHITTLESEY, Comptroller of the Treasury, made a report to the House of Representatives, in which he says:

"In conformity with the provisions of the act of Congress, approved March 3, 1809, entitled 'an act further to amend the several acts for the establishment and regulation of the Treasury, War, and Navy Departments,' and of the act passed March 3, 1817, entitled 'an act to provide for the prompt settlement of the public accounts,' I transmit, herewith, statements of the accounts which remained due more than three years prior to the 1st day of July, 1853, on the books of the Register of the Treasury, and on the books of the Second, Third and Fourth Auditors of the Treasury."

This report, Mr. President, contains ninety-six (96) pages of names, reported in obedience to the requirements of the laws, by Mr. BRUCE, Register of the Treasury, Mr. CLAYTON, Second Auditor, Mr. HYDE, Third Auditor, and Mr. PATTON, Fourth Auditor. These reports of the Auditors of the Treasury Department contain the names of persons whose "accounts have remained unsettled or on which balances appear to have been due more than three years prior to July 1, 1853, furnished in pursuance of the 3d section of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1809, entitled 'An act further to amend the several acts for the establishment and regulation of the Treasury, War and Navy Departments,' and 'the names of all persons to whom advances shall have been made, or balances remained due, one year prior to July 1, 1853, and not have been paid within the year, reported in pursuance of the 13th section of the act of March 3, 1817."

In this long list of names I find the names of [illegible]

On the 1st day of July, 1853, no money was in his hands unaccounted for. He owed the Government nothing. At that very time he had a claim for supplies furnished the Government as early as July, 1853. That claim was examined and reported upon by a Committee of the House of Representatives, at the head of which was Col. OTE, one of the leaders of the Administration in the House.

That Committee reported a bill allowing Col. FREMONT $183,825, and that bill received the unanimous vote of the House and Senate, and the approval of President PIERCE, on the 20th of July, 1854. If his accounts were unsettled if money was in his hands unaccounted for—if the Government had any balance against him, why, Sir, why did not your Administration compel a settlement and secure any claims of the Government when it held $183,825 of JOHN C. FREMONT's in its coffers? Will the Senator from Pennsylvania, will any Senator answer this question?

Some meddling politician in the departments, or who has access to the departments, some little, soulless creature, ever ready to blast the reputation of honorable men, has doubtless found papers bearing upon Col. FREMONT's connections with the Government out of which he thinks extracts can be quoted, if published, by which venal politicians can blacken the reputation of one they fear and hate, and the Senator from Pennsylvania comes into this Chamber, with this resolution, to carry out this small game of political malignity.

I shall vote, Sir, for this inquiry, but I wash my hands of its measures—its object bitterness. If it applied to anybody's candidate but the one which I support, I would vote against it. I would never consent to resort to such petty warfare. The Senator from Pennsylvania assumes to be Mr. BUCHANAN's fugleman here. I have sometimes thought the Senator, in his deep anxiety, felt that he carried Mr. BUCHANAN on his shoulders.

I hold JAMES BUCHANAN responsible for an attempted blow at his rival—struck by the hand of the Senator from Pennsylvania—who professes to be his particular friend, who is ever watchful of his interest and fame. So prompt is the Senator from Pennsylvania to rush to the defence of Mr. BUCHANAN, that I have come to regard him as that gentleman's "premonitory symptom" here. Nothing but that Senator's extreme desire to better the waning fortunes of his Chief could have induced him to engage in this political device.

Mr. PRESIDENT: The people will regard this as persecution. It will bring odium—not upon Col. FREMONT, but upon the men who originated it and move in it.

It will rather redound, as all such attacks against candidates for the Presidency have done, to his advantage. The issues are made up. They are the gravest and most transcendent issues ever presented to the people of the United States.

All that the Senator from Pennsylvania and his candidate can make out of his inquiry will not weigh a feather in the coming contest, which is to decide whether Freedom or Slavery shall sway the policy of the Republic.

Iowa—young Iowa—has uttered her voice for JOHN C. FREMONT by a majority of thousands. Maine will respond to Iowa for the East in a few weeks in a voice not to be mistaken. The Senator cannot break the mighty current that is bearing the friends of free Kansas on to assured triumph by this petty political manœuvre which gentlemen should not stoop to engage in. Pennsylvania, on the 14th of October, may teach her Senator that she is not to be won by any attempt to defame the Chieftain, around whose banner the liberal, progressive, Democratic masses of the country are rallying for the coming fight.

I have not spoken, Mr. President, of the motives that have actuated the Senator from Pennsylvania in introducing this inquiry. I have nothing to do with motives. I have spoken of the act, and I have spoken of it as I think it deserves. Perchance the Senator feels that he has the good name and fame of Col. FREMONT, as well as Mr. BUCHANAN, in his keeping. Perhaps we ought to feel grateful to him for his zeal for the reputation of our candidate, but I cannot but feel that whatever the effects of this inquiry may be upon Col. FREMONT, the Senator will win no laurels by it, that any one will desire to pluck from his brow.

Hon. James Myers of Ohio for Fremont and Freedom.

Hon. JAMES MYERS, late Lieutenant-Governor of Ohio, a staunch Democrat, has just declined the Democratic nomination to Congress, and thus answered an invitation to attend a Fremont meeting:

TOLEDO, Wednesday, July 30, 1856.

GENTLEMEN: Your invitation to attend and address the great Fremont and Dayton mass meeting, to be held at your place on the 6th of August, has been received. I regret that a former engagement, which compels me to leave for the East to-morrow morning, will prevent me from being present upon that occasion.

It would be a source of great pleasure to me to be present at your meeting, and contribute any influence that I might have to the cause of Freedom, the great battle for which is now being fought in this country. The result of the present political contest, I believe, is fraught with the most important consequences to the dearest interests of our common country, and must fix its future destiny, for all time, as to Slavery extension.

The people are now called upon to decide whether Slavery shall spread over the fairest portion of our country, and whether the Slave power shall control the action of this Government for its particular benefit, or whether freemen and free labor shall occupy and cultivate our new Territories, and whether this Government shall be controlled only for the best interests of the whole country. I consider the crisis has arrived when we cannot escape responsibility for our action upon this question; we must choose between Slavery and Freedom in our Territories. For one, I have no second choice in such a contest. I shall be found on the side of Freedom. Make Kansas a Slave State, and all is lost to Freedom; make Kansas a Free State, and it will secure Freedom for all of our present Territories. Kansas is the key to all the wide-extended Territories beyond her; open it to Slavery, and you will curse posterity, and the country with an evil for which there will be no remedy, and will deprive free laborers of an inheritance which justly belongs to them. What a contrast would your course be to that pursued by JEFFERSON and his patriotic cotemporaries, who consecrated all the territory belonging to this country, in their day, to Freedom! Let the free people of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan, evince in this contest their gratitude to those disinterested patriots who bequeathed them Freedom for an heritance instead of Slavery, by extending to the people who may inhabit Kansas, and other Territories, like privileges which we enjoy. How can a man, who has a particle of patriotism burning in his bosom, reflect upon the consequences that inevitably result from the decision of the great issue now before the people, and yet suffer partisan leaders, who expect to have the aid of the united Slave power to give them place and emolument as the reward for their apostacy, to the rights and interests of the North, be influenced to cast their votes to blight the best interests of his country.

I would appeal to my Democratic friends to cast aside all prejudice, and weigh well the great question now pending in this campaign, before casting their votes for men whose election will give force and effect to the Slave interest, merely because they claim to be the nominees of the Democratic organization—an organization which has, at the bidding of the Slave power, repudiated, on the subject of Slavery, every principle of Thomas JEFFERSON, the great apostle of Democracy and founder of the Democratic Party.

I hope there is sufficient intelligence and independence of party discipline to decide this question in favor of Freedom.

I am, with great respect,

Your obedient servant,

JAMES MYERS.

GREAT FOOT RACE.—On Thursday, a single foot race, two-mile heats, took place at Ramsey, between JOHN GRIFFITH, of New-York, an English pedestrian, named COOK, and five Indians, for a purse of $100. Gamblers was cash heat, notwithstanding a fresh Indian was put upon the course at the commencement of each mile. GRIFFITH made the following time: First mile, 5:10; second, 5:39; third, 5:17; fourth, 5:37; fifth, 5:45; and sixth, 5:17. Total, 31:45. About 1,500 persons were on hand to witness the proceedings.

LAWRENCE, KANS., Sunday, Aug. 3, 1856.

MESSRS. CLIFF and RANKIN, of whom I wrote you in my last as confined in the jail at Hamburville, Missouri, to-day arrived in town. From Mr. CLIFF I gathered the following facts:

STATEMENT OF J. N. CLIFF.

I was formerly from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and now reside on Sugar Creek, in this Territory, in company with W. M. RANKIN. About the 18th Mr. RANKIN went down to Liberty, Mo., to get a pair of spectacles, if possible, as he and his friends were not armed, they having come to the Territory with the intention of being non-resistants. He succeeded in getting the arms in question—he not being known in Liberty. While returning, in the Territory within six miles of home, he was met by an armed and mounted company of Pro-Slavery men, who ordered him to halt and requested him to state where he was going, where he was from and what he had in his carpet-sack. They ordered him to give up the pistols he had in his hand. He raised his pistol and fired, barrel after barrel, as fast as he could shoot. They made a drive at him with a bayonet. (They had United States muskets with bayonets.) The bayonet struck his breast, but only inflicted a flesh-wound, glancing off along his ribs. They then clubbed him with their guns, knocking him from his horse senseless to the ground. They stripped him of his arms, horse, some thirty dollars in money and other articles, while he lay senseless. They then left him, supposing him dead, and led his horse away. He rose some time after—in time to see them going over the prairie. Though faint, he followed after them as fast as he could. They left the road, went into the timber, lighted a fire and camped. When they became quiet, he searched for his horse; not finding him, after searching as long as he dared, he took another—a filly that was saddled, close to the camp. He then started off. About 9 o'clock at night Mr. RANKIN's horse came home without saddle or bridle; the horse had a piece of hickory bark round his neck, broken off, which it had evidently broken to get loose. Mr. RANKIN had not got home, having slept out on the prairie. Next morning Mr. CLIFF started off to look for him and met him on the prairie. They then started back, on the suggestion of RANKIN, to try and find the trail of those who had assailed him. Having ridden several miles they stopped to let their horses rest. Mr. CLIFF had laid down and gone to sleep; Mr. RANKIN was, also, lying down. While in this situation Mr. RANKIN heard the approach of a party of horsemen, and aroused his companion by crying: "My God, here is the same company of fellows." Both were unarmed. CLIFF wanted his companion should start. RANKIN hesitated, but as they could offer no resistance RANKIN got on his horse and started. CLIFF's horse was so tired and broken down that he knew he could not get off. Ten of them gave chase to RANKIN, and followed him ten miles until he struck the head waters of the Osage, but they did not succeed in catching him.

The others came up to CLIFF, and asked him what business he had there. He said there he was a full-blooded Yankee, and went where he pleased on United States soil. They asked him what he was doing; he replied that he was warming in the sun. They asked him why the other man ran? He said that half of the number of men now after him would make any one of their number run. They asked him who the other man was? He told them they would know if they caught him. They then turned away and left him, one of them saying that he was a ——d psalm-singing Yankee, and they could not get any sense out of him. They went in pursuit of those who were following RANKIN, and CLIFF started for home. RANKIN, by the time he got to the Osage, had got out of sight of his pursuers, and being uncertain of whether he was pursued, he dismounted, tied up his horse in a thicket, and climbed a tree, to watch for events. He had been there but a short time when he saw his pursuers approaching. They passed on about one hundred yards from the tree where RANKIN was, and disappeared. RANKIN then returned home. The next day the Pro-Slavery men got out a warrant against both CLIFF and RANKIN for horse-stealing. The warrants were a printed blank; but the blanks were not all filled up, and the Justice had not attached his name to them. The Pro-Slavery men guarded their house all night. The next morning a Deputy Sheriff came with the writs. They sent up a person to converse with them, to ascertain whether they would yield. CLIFF informed them that they never would allow themselves to be taken by a mob. This person told them they would take them before Justice MEARS or any other Squire, and they should have a fair trial. CLIFF told him they were willing to have a legal investigation of the affair, and the party came up and they were taken before Squire MEARS. They had promised CLIFF that he could have any witnesses summoned that he wanted, and Squire MEARS went through the process of filling out subpœnas at the instance of CLIFF, but they were never served. Nothing was proved against the prisoners. The party at whose instance they were taken swore that the young man "had a horse that did not belong to him," but none of them could claim it. RANKIN told before the Justice how the whole thing occurred, and CLIFF corroborated the particulars, as far as he knew; but the Pro-Slavery party, Justice and all, affected to discredit the statement, and of course they had no witnesses. CONKLIN said he wanted to know who owned the horse, but the knaves who [illegible] the prisoners to the mercy of bogus law. A Committee of ten men were appointed to take them to Harrisonville, Mo., where the Justice said they must be taken, as he had no doubt but they were guilty. The prisoners were taken to Harrisonville. There the captors found some difficulty about getting them in jail, not but what the Missourians were willing to keep them, but a lawyer in Harrisonville told the captors that the whole thing was so irregular that the prisoners would be liable to be taken out by their friends on a writ of habeas corpus. It was then determined that they should be taken back. That night they were permitted to remain at the hotel, provided they paid their own bill. Two of the men who guarded them slept in the room with them, and the leader of the party slept with the keeper of the hotel. [illegible] they were taken back to Liberty. Here they were taken back to the house of Justice MEARS. At this stage of the affair the Pro-Slavery men got uneasy, alarmed at the report that fifty Free-State men were assembling to the rescue of the prisoners. The people of Harrisonville believed the Justice [illegible] and been shot down if they had [illegible] [illegible] the Justice and [illegible]

While in custody they [illegible] thing but ruffians could visit upon them, including a shot-gun, pistols, &c.

Rev. Mr. Rising, by permission of Capt. Shaw, was allowed divine service on the camp ground with prisoners, and confined, to-day. A great many people from Lawrence were in attendance. It is said the services were extremely interesting. Rev. Mr. Lutz will preach there next Sunday.

A COURT-MARTIAL, PERHAPS.

It is said that the War Department have signified to the commander at Fort Leavenworth its intention to investigate the conduct of the officers who made such a ridiculous exhibition of their preferences for the National Democratic candidate, in our last public dress, while they were in a state of intoxication. We do not hear that an inquiry is to be made into the conduct of Lieut. PERKINS, who, at the direction of HANEY, who was not even a bogus-legal officer, without any writs, arrested Messrs. LEGATE and HOFF, and afterwards formed his soldiers in front of a grog-shop, and had a pail full of whisky passed round to them.

Col. C. W. TOTTLEN, Commander of the Kansas Free-State Militia, has just returned from Kansas to recruit his health, which is shattered by the hardships and exposures he has suffered. He reports the sufferings of the settlers as being severe—destitute as they are of supplies, and means to get any. When he left, the means sent to buy food had not arrived, but have probably been received since. There is great need of arms—nearly the whole population being destitute of them. The spirits of the Free-State men are good, considering their sufferings; but many are getting sick, and for want of the necessaries of life.

Col. TOTTLEN thinks the emigrants with LANE will succeed in getting through. The routes have been explored, roads made, and guides furnished. Col. TOTTLEN has also succeeded in getting up as good an organization for self-defence throughout the Territory as can be done till arms and equipments are supplied.

The Iowa Election.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

BURLINGTON, IOWA, Friday, Aug. 8, 1856.

"We have met the enemy and they are ours!" Little Iowa, one of the last stars in the constellation of the confederation, has struck the first blow at the Border Ruffians, and it has been a stunner!

As much of the State is not accessible for immediate returns from the election which took place on Monday, the 4th inst., the figures do not come in very clear yet, but enough is known to be able to say beyond a doubt, that the entire Republican State ticket is elected by at least 5,000 majority, and both Congressmen of the same politics. Mr. INGERSOLL, who couldn't see any difference on the stump between a horse and a negro, will have an opportunity of ascertaining the anatomical analogy between the two at home. He is defeated by several thousand majority. A righteous judgment, truly. So much for August. November will be a good deal more so. Much of this victory is due to the true-hearted, patriotic Germans, who rallied nobly in defence of freedom of speech, free labor and free soil. They plainly saw the collision between the Americans and the Democracy, and took the first opportunity to rebuke it in a manner not to be mistaken.

The result has filled all our hearts with joy. Our people have always been as unanimously Democratic, and have always polled as one in the harness, that in spite the indignant rebuke they administered the compromise-breakers two years ago, we feared that the result this time would be such as to give hopes for Northern and load the Administration men to renewed efforts, in hopes of carrying the day for BUCHANAN. But this all has been dispelled by the events of last Monday. Six Towns down as good for at least 10,000 majority for FREMONT and DAYTON. DEMOCRITUS.

The Atherton Gag.

The public doubtless remember the celebrated resolutions to suppress freedom of speech introduced into Congress in 1838 by ATHERTON, of New-Hampshire. The following, from a recent number of the Charleston Mercury, shows that Mr. ATHERTON was deliberately chosen by the Southern nullifiers to do this work for them, and that he cheerfully consented to be their tool:

"At the time they were introduced, they were adopted by a Democratic caucus, on the night of the 8th of December, 1838, and were placed in the hands of Mr. ATHERTON for presentation in the House, but it did not state who was the author of them. We think it now proper to state, that they were prepared by Hon. R. B. RHETT, then a member of the House of Representatives. He had a caucus called together to consider them. He presented them to the caucus, and after they were adopted, nominated Mr. FAIRFIELD, of Maine, then newly-elected Governor of that State, while a member of Congress, to present them. Mr. FAIRFIELD declined, on the ground that, being shortly about to leave Congress, to enter upon his Gubernatorial duties, it was not proper that he should present them. He thought that it should be done by one who would be able, as a member of Congress, to defend them in the House of Representatives. Mr. RHETT then nominated Mr. ATHERTON to present them, who assumed the duty and performed it handsomely."

How to Preserve the Union—Common Sense from an Unexpected Quarter.

From the Richmond Enquirer.

Our hopes of the continuance of the Union arise, in great measure, from what are popularly supposed as causes of its dissolution.

Variety of interests, of pursuits, and of social organization, produces adaptation and harmony, and promotes peace and good-will, as well between nations as individuals. Similarity of occupations of conditions, and of productions, engenders rivalry, jealousy, competition, and discord.

The North and the South engaged in different pursuits, having different wants, and supplying different conditions, [illegible] and consumers, [illegible] and consumers, to each other. The one [illegible] without the other. They used to [illegible] each other, and would do so again [illegible] the Abolitionists. But there one cause [illegible] stronger than Abolition, that may yet [illegible] reason the contrary. The manufacturer, the mechanic, and the ship-owners of the North, see in the South their best customers. The laborers of the North, now engaged chiefly in producing manufactured articles that pay the laborer $2 per day, if cut off from the Southern market, must work in the corn field or cotton field at $1 a-day. The farmers, too, of the South, will be glad to preserve the Union, and retain the Northern market for their products, if they can do so on fair and honorable terms.

The great and growing Northwest finds her best market for her horses, hogs, beef, and mules, at the South. Because that, her only efficient water outlet to the foreign world is by the Mississippi, which passes through a great many Slave States. Add to these ties of Union the Covington and Ohio Road, and we see no reason to desire of the Atlantic. That road is the shortest outlet to the Atlantic, for almost the entire Northwest—passes through a mild climate, and has gentle grades, adapting it to carry heavy freights at all seasons. The honor and interest of Virginia, as well as the security of the Union, require its speedy completion. Let us not lose sight of it, amid the turmoil of political politics. Such is intimately and vitally connected with national politics.

When completed, it will be the greatest work of internal improvement known, and whatever may be the amount of population and wealth, which will be poured into the mineral and agricultural resources of the West, it will be able to carry the products of the West to the Atlantic, and return with the products of the East, at the cheapest rate of transportation.

NEW-YORK CITY.

On motion of Alderman SLY, the report of the Board of Councilmen relating to the proposed location of the New-City Hall was taken from the table. After some debate, rather of a desultory character, Alderman TUCKER moved to recommit the Mayor's plan, but thought a better plan could be adopted; and, without any further discussion, the plan, as adopted, was put to the vote, and it was carried. The Mayor was compelled to do so. In the first place, it was too dark; there were not windows enough in it. The great objection was that it was under so far into the business blocks, which the Alderman [illegible] Madison-square was the Astor Place for a new City Hall.

Alderman VOORHIS strongly advocated the plan of the new building, as being in the center of our rapidly-increasing population, demanded it.

Alderman BROWN moved that the subject be laid on the table. Lost.

Alderman HOFFMAN moved that the Board adjourn. Lost.

Alderman TUCKER offered an amendment to the amendment, that the whole subject be referred to a Special Committee. Lost.

Alderman CLANCY moved to adjourn. Lost.

Alderman SHEAR moved the previous question. Lost.

Alderman HILLS moved to adjourn. Carried.

So journed to this afternoon.

BOARD OF CONCILIATION.

The President, R. F. PENNOYER, Esq., in the Chair.

Several petitions were received and referred. Among others, petitions for a sewer in Seventh-street, from Seventh-avenue to North River; for a gas main in the Committee on Streets, in Forty-fifth-street paved, from Ninth-avenue to the North River.

RESOLUTIONS.

A resolution was offered by Councilman CHASE, "That the Comptroller be directed to report to this Board the number of judgments against the City during the past two years, together with the amount of all persons obtaining the same, with the amount of costs, interest and judgment thereon." The resolution was adopted.

THE SEWERS AND THE CONTRACTORS.

Also, by Councilman SWANN:

"Whereas, Since the 1st May, 1855, the sewers of the City of New-York have been constructed contrary, therefore, in flagrant violation of the provisions of section 19, of the amended Charter of the City, therefore,

Resolved, That in the opinion of this Board the Commissioner of Sewers and Lamps has neglected to carry the provisions of the Charter, and consequently himself, Judge Rome, the contractors, and those other, by concerted resolution of both Boards of the Common Council."

The resolution, which elicited very little debate, was laid over.

A communication was received from the Commissioner of Sewers and Lamps, stating that only one sewer has been completed since last meeting, leaving the balance of the appropriation $20,000, which was exceeded by the payment of $20,000 for the Comptroller for last year's deficiency, and the payment of the Board Contractor for cleaning [illegible] October, he asked for an appropriation of $20,000 for 1856, and $20,000 to meet the sewers passed by the Board, and $20,000 for the Comptroller, also for $72,000 for the deficiency of 1855. He stated, that if the sewers passed by the Board, this department would have had a balance of cleaning the sewers without appropriation, and no debt.

This communication was placed on the table, and ordered to be printed. After the transaction of some other unimportant business the Board adjourned to meet the first Monday in September.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

This Board met yesterday, Gideon Tucker, Esq., in the Chair. There was a small attendance, and for some time it was doubtful whether there would be a quorum. Alderman CLANCY offered the following resolution, which gave rise to considerable discussion:

Resolved, That the County Treasurer be and he is hereby directed to pay the bills of Alderman A. Baker, for repairing and furnishing hearse for the Register's Office, said bills having been audited and allowed by the Board.

Alderman CLANCY stated that Comptroller Flagler had refused to pay the bill. He argued that the County Treasurer was the proper person to pay the bills of a County Board.

A motion to lay on the table was lost. A motion to refer was lost, and finally the resolution was adopted, by a vote of 11 to 4.

A report in favor of the Committee on County Offices, in favor of paying the bill of C. N. Fowler, for services in Clerk to the City Judge, [illegible] was adopted by a vote of [illegible]

A report of the same Committee, in favor of paying the bill of Baxter Gallagher, for services in [illegible] the office of the Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas, was adopted.

Adjourned to this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

MR. BIGELOW'S LIFE OF FREMONT

Why Behoved he to be the hands of every friend of THE COMING PRESIDENT.

From the Author's Introduction.

"He has undertaken to lay before the reader every event in the life of Col. FREMONT, and the substance of every written and spoken word of a public character he has written or made, leaving a candid public to judge of his character in regard to his qualifications for the highest honors of the Republic. The author is not conscious of having suppressed anything that ought to have been recorded, or of having stated a single fact which he did not believe, on the evidence of his senses, to be correct. He has, however, by a high a degree of impartiality as his personal feelings would permit, he has cautiously and fairly exposed, he has cautiously given official documents and contemporary evidence of the events he records whenever it was practicable, that his readers may have as little cause as possible in adjusting the measure of allegiance to be made for the particulars of a political or personal friend. Thus, a clear and full account, the most authentic obtainable, is a more eulogy, not a faithful record of the Life of Colonel FREMONT, prepared, if not with skill and elegance, at least with diligence and a conscientious regard for truth."

A NEW COOPER!
JUST PUBLISHED,
SARATOGA; A TALE OF 1757.
A ROMANCE OF AMERICAN BORDER LIFE.
One Volume. 12mo. Muslin. Price, $1 25.

Cooper's favorite haunt of his childhood themselves mainly to sketches of social and domestic life. They have already produced a sensation, and cabinet pieces in their kind they are. The author of "SARATOGA" has chosen a bolder venture. Conversant with a border land, familiar with the scenes of his childhood, and with the traditions of Revolutionary days, he has constructed a narrative full of startling incident and thrilling adventure without violating the probabilities of history. The bold, rapid, and graphic style of the author, the wildness of Indian Colony, and the well-drawn characters, will commend favorably with the best productions in the "Leather-stocking Tales" of the great American Novelist. Mark Cooper set forth his earlier and better powers, as a dramatic author, but written a work of the entertaining merits equal to this tale of life on the borders.

The title of this book gives us to know at once the nature of its contents. It should be in the hands of an exciting character.

[illegible]

[illegible] average lot of Cattle weighing [illegible] the week at 300 lbs. net. Sales were made at $74, $75 [illegible] and $80 each. The same brokers state, also, selling another lot of 42 Ohio Cattle, of medium quality, averaging [illegible] lbs., at about $[illegible].

[illegible] Bummer sent forward 90 head of Cattle from Pickaway County, Ohio, weighing, at home, about 1,200 lbs. Sixty of these were fed by JOHN BOGGS. They were sold by BARNEY BARNUM at 9c.@10c.

JOHN BAKER had on sale 77 Kentucky cattle of superior quality. Indeed there were but few if any better on market. These were selling by S. SHANNAN, at about 9¾c. on all averages, net weight 1[illegible] lbs. Gen. HAWES took 20 head at $[illegible] each. Mr. BAKER purchased this lot in Albany of J. WEAVE, who brought them through from Kentucky, at an expense of about $[illegible] a head.

MILCH COWS WITH CALVES.

Milch Cows are sold at each of the above yards, usually with their Calves at their sides. The prices vary somewhat with the supply and demand, and very greatly, of course, upon the milking value. The particular fancy of the buyer has also considerable to do with the price. Not unfrequently a Cow is sold at $90@$100, or even $120. The general price throughout the year for ordinary Cows is $60 to $45 or $50. Quite a number sell (above $50, and more, perhaps, below $50). We often see apologies for Cows at $35@$40. The weekly reports from the different yards will give the weekly fluctuations:

The number of Cows offered for sale during the past week has not been large, but just about enough to supply the demand. There appears to be a brisker market, however, and none left over.

ALLERTON reports 19 Milch Cows, not materially changed as to selling rates; perhaps a trifle lower, with more activity.

BROWNING reports 75 Milch Cows, selling a shade lower than last week.

CHAMBERLIN reports 81 Milch Cows, selling at $30@$60 for common, $65@$80 for good; extras, $90@$100.

O'BRIEN reports 36 Milch Cows, selling at $35@$40. There is no advance in price, but a brisker trade. Stock about the same as last week.

VEAL CALVES.

Veal Calves are sold by live weight, each animal being weighed alive at the time of sale. The principal places of sale are ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, CHAMBERLIN'S, and O'BRIEN'S.

The number of Calves offered varies only a single one from last week. They are selling at a little advance over former prices.

ALLERTON reports 666 Veal Calves selling for 4c. to 6¼c. Demand moderate.

BROWNING reports 108 Veal Calves, selling generally at 4¾c.@5c., extra 5½c. The numbers are quite an advance over last week, and prices about ½c. higher.

CHAMBERLIN reports 132 Veal Calves, selling at 4½c.@5½c.

O'BRIEN reports 44 Veal Calves, selling at 5c.@5½c. All were sold at the above rates, which do not vary materially from last week.

SHEEP AND LAMBS.

These are chiefly sold at ALLERTON'S, BROWNING'S, and CHAMBERLIN'S, at so much ⅌ head for a particular lot of Sheep or Lambs, or of the two together. They are also frequently sold by live weight, at the yards usually mentioned. The actual prices at the different yards seldom vary greatly. The difference in reported prices is generally due to variation in the quality.

There were 1,400 more Sheep and Lambs in market during the past week than the week previous, which with the usual quota of beef and Veal Calves, leaves a dull market for so many Sheep. The stock on hand was in fair condition, but the prices have declined fully ½c. ⅌ lb.

ALLERTON reports receipts of 2,399 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $2@$5. The stock is unusually large, and prices have declined at least ½c. ⅌ lb. One drove which cost $2 62½c. cash, in Columbia County, were offered re-day for $2 50, and did not find a purchaser at that. A large number have arrived from Albany.

BROWNING reports receipts of 4,406 Sheep and Lambs. Sheep selling at $2@$5; Lambs selling at $1 75@$6.

CHAMBERLIN reports receipts of 5,164 Sheep and Lambs, selling at $2 50@$6 ⅌ head, which is a decline from last week's prices.

SWINE.

These are sold alive at so much ⅌ lb., gross or live weight. Considerable numbers are sold at ALLERTON'S, Forty-fourth-street, and at various other yards, while large droves are sold direct from the cars or boats, and driven immediately to the various slaughter-houses.

There is quite a scarcity in the Swine market, and prices have increased.

ALLERTON reports 368 Swine received during the week, which sold readily at 7c.@7¼c. ⅌ lb., leaving the market bare.

Philadelphia Cattle Market.

PHILADELPHIA, Wednesday, Aug. 12.

The market for Cattle yesterday and to-day was rather better than as our last quotations, and prices somewhat improved for all grades of stock.

BEEF CATTLE.—The entire sales amounted to 1,000 head, most of which were from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania, and were owned by Messrs. KENNEDY, LAUGHLIN, HENDERSON, KENE and others. The prices ranged from $8@$8 50, $9, and $9 50 ⅌ 100 lbs., and very few bringing beyond the last named sum. GANS & MCQUAID sold 60 Ohio Cattle for $55 ⅌ head.

SHEEP.—This market was full and active, 6,500 head having been disposed of at Torbert's Avenue Drove Yard, 1,600 from Ohio, owned by GANSS, brought from $3 50 to $3 75 ⅌ head, and other lots, numbering from 900 to 1,700 head, sold from $3 75 to $4 and $4 75, and a few at $4 ⅌ head.

HOGS.—All the stock offered at this market was sold, the number amounting to 1,200 head. Prices ranged from $8 50 to $9 ⅌ 100 lbs. They were principally from Ohio, having been brought on per Pennsylvania Railroad.

COWS AND CALVES.—This market continues dull, only 120 head having been sold at from $35 to $50 and $60 ⅌ head.

Wholesale Produce Markets.

Reported exclusively for the New-York Daily Times.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, Aug. 13, 1858.

The prices given in our reports from week to week are the average wholesale prices obtained by producers, and not those at which produce is sold from the market. The variations in prices relatively to the qualities of the articles.

The Produce market is becoming more stable as to prices.

The prospect is for a good supply of the various vegetables and fruits, with the exception of peaches.

Sweetmeat potatoes have so nearly passed from the market, that we cull to quote them, and in their place substitute Sweet potatoes which begin to arrive from Virginia. A fair supply is looked for from that State.

Peaches are very scarce this season, and what there are are not of the best quality. We are assured by those who have had data for knowing, that the crop in New-Jersey and Delaware will not be more than one-fourth the usual amount, and the orchards on Long Island promise little better.

Butter is in good demand, and the trade active.

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.

	Upland.	Florida.	Mobile.	N. O. & T.
Ordinary	10	10	10	10½
Middling	11½	11½	11½	11½
Midling Fair	12½	12½	12½	12½

DRY GOODS—We find more vigor in this branch of trade. Country dealers, especially from the South and West, are quite numerous in market, and local jobbers are moving with more spirit. This gives a strong stimulus to business, and large operations are daily transpiring in both domestic and foreign productions, at prices which the more reasonable regard as satisfactory, though they do not generally equal the anticipations of the sanguine. Our people are in a very prosperous condition, and there is no reason to dread a restricted traffic. It mainly rests with factors the power to render it profitable to themselves and not injurious to the country. Domestic Cottons and Woolens find very ready purchasers, and prices thereof are quite as firm and buoyant as usual at this season of the year in the safest times. Foreign fabrics are very freely dealt in, both by country dealers and local jobbers, and these con mand full rates, especially such goods as recent European news represents to be in advance in the markets of the old world. The current imports are large, and the available supply is very ample, so that nearly all orders are of easy execution.

DUCK—Ravens, $7 for light, and $9 for heavy, ⅌ piece.

FEATHERS—Live Geese, 50c.@55c. ⅌ lb.

FIRE CRACKERS—Canton, 40 packs, $1 60 ⅌ box.

FISH—Dry Cod are scarce and needed at from $3 50@$4 50 ⅌ cwt. Mackerel are quiet and languid at $20@$20 50 for large No. 1; $9 50@$11 for small do.; $11@$11 50 for large No. 2; $8 75@$7 for small and medium do.; $5 50@$4 50 for large No. 3; and $4 75@$3 50 for small and medium do. ⅌ bbl. Pickled Salmon, $28@$30 ⅌ barrel, $15 50@$16 ⅌ bbl. Shad at $10 50 for Connecticut No. 1, and $9 50 for do. No. 2, ⅌ half bbl. Pickled Herring bring, in lots, $3 50@$3 75 ⅌ bbl. Smoked Herring are in light supply and fair request at 47½c.@50c. for Scaled, and 30c. for No. 1, ⅌ box.

FLAX—Jersey is worth 10½c.@11c. ⅌ lb.

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market for State and Western Flour exhibits renewed vigor, factors being less eager sellers, while the prevailing demand is brisker, both for home use and for export. The sales since our last reach about 11,200 bbls., in lots, mainly at prices within the annexed range:

Superfine No. 2	$3 00@$3 50
Ordinary State	3 65@$3 75
Straight State	3 75@$3 85
Favorite and Extra State	3 85@$3 95
Common to Good Michigan	3 30@$3 75
Common to Good Indiana & Upper Lake	3 85@$4 10
Common to Good Ohio	3 60@$3 85
Fancy Michigan	3 75@$3 90
Fancy Ohio	3 90@$4 50
Extra Michigan	3 90@$4 00
Extra Indiana and Wisconsin	3 25@$4 50
Extra Ohio	3 50@$4 75
Fancy Genesee	3 40@$4 65
Extra Genesee	3 65@$4 00
Extra Missouri	3 50@$3 60

Canadian is doing better, the transactions since our last having amounted to about 1,100 bbls, ordinary to best Extra, mostly at $3@$4 70 ⅌ bbl. Southern is abundant and prices of common qualities are declining. Desirable lots are firm. The general inquiry is very active. The sales since our last comprise about 4,500 bbls. Mixed to Fancy and best Extra, at $3 40@$3 and $3 10 ⅌ bbl. Rye Flour is dull and heavy, $3@$4 87½ for Fine and Superfine ⅌ bbl. Corn Meal is sparingly offered, and is in pretty fair request at $3 75 for Jersey, and $4 12½ for Brandywine, ⅌ bbl. The latter brings $17 in purchasers.

FRUIT—The market for all kinds remains very quiet as about previous figures. The available supply is a moderate one. Raisins $4 75 for Layer, and $2 25@$3 75 for Bunch, ⅌ whole box; Sardines, 55c. @60c. ⅌ box; prime Smyrna Currants, 9½c.@10c.; Leghorn Citron, 17½c.@18c.; Shelled Almonds, 31c. @35c.; Paper Shell Almonds, 20c.@24½c.; Hard Shell Almonds, 16c.@16½c.; Soft Shell Almonds, 20c. @22c.; Prunes, 7c.@10c.; Filberts, 8½c.; Small Nuts, 45c.@11½c. ⅌ lb; Cocoa Nuts, $3@$3 25 ⅌ hundred; and Dried Apples, 4½c.@5c. ⅌ lb.

FURS—The branch of trade continues without any noticeable improvement.

GRAIN—Wheat is rather less freely offered, and being in good request, partly for home use, but mainly for export, prices have slightly improved, closing with considerable buoyancy and an upward tendency. The sales since our last reach about 90,000 bushels, including good to prime Canadian White, at $1 [illegible]; Amber Western, at $1 [illegible]; and Lost, 31c.@32c.; Rhode-Island, 32c.@33c.; Southern, [illegible]; Rye is quiet and steady. Sales of 1,000 bushels Western at 75c. Corn is in good request, and prices have advanced 1c.@2c. ⅌ bushel. Sales of 40,000 bushels Southern Yellow, in store, at 61c.@62c.; 5,000 bushels Western Mixed, in store, at 62c.; 5,000 bushels Western Yellow, in store, at 63c.; 5,000 bushels Western Mixed, afloat, at 61c.; 5,000 bushels Southern White, afloat, at 62c.; and 5,000 bushels Southern Yellow, afloat, at 63c.
